

ABSTRACT

A method for repairing a failed network connection between a client system and a network is disclosed. In a first aspect, the method preferably includes collecting real time connectivity information by the client system and utilizing the real time connectivity
5 information by the client system to establish a connection with the network.